Tidbit From The Past

by Bill Lloyd

During the Depression, while helping my dad herd sheep out in the Hanna/Tabiona area, I had to ride my horse bareback. So one day I asked the boss if he had a saddle that I could use. He said that he would bring me one. I had told everyone that I was getting a new saddle. The day came when he presented the saddle to me. I was disappointed to see that it was an ancient, wrinkled, old saddle that should have been shot and buried. I had to use it anyway, so when I had to go into Fruitland to the store, I tied my horse up to a cedar tree and walked in so no one would see my saddle.

The boys in Fruitland had good saddles. They asked me where my horse and my new saddle was, they had already seen it in the back of the pickup truck and wanted to tease me about it.

When my Dad and I were sheep-herding out in the area of Duchesne for the Murdocks during the Depression, we would have to go to the Murdock Ranch in Tabby and pick up our supplies, only this time we were to go to the other sheep herd, where Lovell Murdock was herding to pick our supplies up.

No one was there so we went into the supply wagon and picked up boxes of canned food. They were smaller cans than usual so we took a lot more of them.

Dinner time at the camp up on the mountain: Dad opened up a few cans and they were nothing but ground up looking stuff. We thought, what are they feeding us this stuff for? They must have run out of the good food. So we had to open about ten cans before we could get enough of the mush to get filled up.

The next day, Lovell came up to the camp and asked how things were going. He happened to go past the heap where all those little cans were piled. He said, "So this is where all of my baby's food went!"
